- 1) I am a grumpy old man and my grandchildren came to visit me and set up netflix on my computer. I do not know what I want to watch, or even how to begin choosing what I would watch. Or why I would even watch something. It is rainy outside on October 11th, and I would like to watch something Halloween themed, because my grandkids are coming to trick-or-treat with me in my neighborhood, and I want to get in the Halloween spirit! I would also like to be able to log in and save my movie choices, as well as share them with my children on the Facebook, which they also signed me up for. I would like to just be able to click a button and have a suggestion for what I can watch. There should be an option to just click on button, based on the season and weather, and have a few movie suggestions that I can choose from, just one movie as an option, but the ability to click the button again if I do not want to watch that particular movie. But really, just one button that I can click over and over to get a movie I want, none of this nonsense of scrolling through hordes of movies without knowing what I want to watch, once I've decided I do indeed want to watch anything.
- 2) I am the granddaughter who helped my grandpa sign up for Facebook and showed him how to get to the app and how to save all the movies he wants to watch. He was very stubborn so it took a while for me to explain how to log into Facebook. I told him how he needs to use his email and create a password. I also had to teach him how to use the app and how to choose movies to watch. It was very difficult to explain to him about the many different genres and when you pick a genre a new list of movies show up and you can pick again. I know my grandpa wants to watch scary Halloween movies but I'm a teenager who just broke up with her boyfriend and doesn't want to scroll through Netflix. I just want to watch a very depressing and sad movie so I can cry my eyes out all night. I log into the app through my Facebook so I can tell all my friends and family how sad I'm feeling and what types of movies I'm watching to get me over my depression. My friends and family can also give me recommendations through Facebook about which movies I should watch. After logging into Facebook, I search through the different genres based on my mood and pick the tear-jerker and drama genres. Then a list of movies come out and I pick out a movie from that list.
- 3) Hi, I am an incredibly busy mother of two bouncing baby children and I really don't have enough time to scroll through all of the shows that Netflix has to offer to make sure that they are child friendly. I need it to look into my account that I have my children on while they are watching TV to get an idea of what they like to watch. I can't always be sitting with them going through all of the options, trying them out for a few minutes only to have my kids tell me that they hate it. But I also don't want my kids to just be watching nonsense, I need them to actually be learning every once in awhile. I don't need them to be watching Action Robot Task Force whatever all the time. Also, since it is around Halloween time, I am planning to host a little kid's party that I will be playing movies in the background. I need it to choose movies for me that are child friendly but also Halloween themed. I will be doing the same thing around Christmas time where I will be hosting my extended family at our house, including my niece who just went through a rough breakup. I don't need her to be choosing the movies for me, which would be so much easier, but she's been so depressed recently and all she watches are mopey romance movies, which I certainly don't need my kids to be watching. It's annoying, but if this can choose a Christmas movie for me that would be amazing.

- 4) During a party where everyone wants to watch a movie but can't decide what movie to watch. I recommended this app to pick a movie for us on Netflix. I opened the app it says "error: not connected to in the internet". Then I found the wifi cable was unplugged by our landlord since I still haven't pay the rent for this month. I connected the cable and logged in the app. Now it says "Wrong username or password". I just can't remember the combination when I registered so I signed up for a new account through a different facebook account. Then I get the error: "Account already registered!" Okay, looks like my little brother is already using this app. I finally log in with his account and started look through some suggestions. I knew this app helps people search through movies that suites the current weather and date. So I go ahead and click on "Movies for now!" Oh, something shows up : "It is not a good day for a movie, go study hard!"
